PROJECT DESCRIPTION

Living Smart Schools aims to help shape the school of the future by improving educational settings, empowering teachers and school principals, and promoting quality, equity and sustainable practices in education. Its five specific objectives are to: raise policy and social recognition of school principals' role in educational innovation and quality; equip principals to develop thriving learning communities and regenerative learning spaces; prepare pre-service and in-service teachers to address teaching and learning challenges, manage multicultural classrooms, support school well-being and strengthen literacy; advance teaching and learning through innovative methodologies, literacy, AI, digital tools and sustainable practices; and strengthen lifelong peer learning and networking across Europe.

Over its 36-month duration, the project plans 49 national and international events involving 500 participants, including principals, in-service and pre-service teachers, higher-education students and policymakers. The Living Smart Schools Academy will develop three results: the Learning and Creative Leadership Programme for principals; the In-service Teachers' Training Programme; and the Teachers' Pre-Induction Programme for higher-education students. In year three, the consortium will prepare a sustainability and long-term action plan.
